Kinnock likely to block Benn's return to power

By Philip Webster, Political Reporter

Attempts by the far left to restore Mr Wedgwood Benn to his power base inside the Labour Party are expected to be frustrated by Mr Neil Kinnock after his likely election as leader in October.

executive committee (NEC) elections, at the party conference are almost certain to result in gains for the outside or "serious" left, but not enough to give them overall control. Instead the advances made by the right at last year's conference are expected to be reversed and the ascendency taken by a coalition of the centre-right and soft left, which will uphold Mr Kinnock's

Far left sources, however, have made clear that they will try to get Mr Benn reelected to his former post as chairman of the party's home policy com-mittee, which played an important role in the policy decisions which ld to the eventual adoption of the most left-wing election manifesto in the party's Left-wing supporters of Mr Benn made clear yesterday that although he was grateful for the offer he could never have countenanced it because he would not have wanted to create an artificial by-election. They consider that Mr Benn's return at a by-election is "only a

Home international football's finale

By Stuart Jones, Football Correspondent

The British home football championship, which began in 1883-84 and is the oldest have enought gaps in international competition in the world, is to be discontinued at the end of the 1983-84 season.

The Football Association's international committee yesterday voted by a substantial margin to withdraw from the event next year and the Scottish authorities, who are known to be sympathetic to the move, are expected to decide

Fears grow for informer's wife

A police hunt was still under way in co Donegal last night for several members of a kidnap gang as fears grew for the safety of an informer's wife being held by the Irish National Liberation Army. (Richard Ford writes from Belfast).

Two men detained by the police after the rescue on Thursday of the stepfather and half-sister of the INLA informer Henry Kirkpatrick, aged 25, are being questioned by detectives at Letterkenny. Both men had addresses in co Donegal: one is Scan O'Hara, whose brother. Patsy, died on hunger strike in the Maze prison in 1981.

Four other men from Londonderry, who were held on the Fanad peninsular on Thursday night, were expected to be released by the police after ingerprinting and questioning.

Their relatives alleged that the men, from the Shantallow area of Londonderry, had been in the republic on a regular weekly fishing trip, that their car was packed with fishing tackle and lunch boxes.

In co Donegal the police were combing the rugged countryside for up to eight members of the gang who fled in four hijacked cars as the police arrived at the five-bedroom house in Gorta-hork, where Mr Richard Hill, aged 50, and his daughter, Diane, aged 13, had been held for almost two weeks.

Detectives believe at least 10 people. including a woman, were involved in their abduction from a holiday home in co Mayo as part of an attempt to force Mr Kirkpatrick, formerly Belfast quartermaster of INLA to withdraw statements implicating 18 people in serious terrorist crime.

As Mr Hill, his wife, Eileer and daughter, Diane, returned to their home in Belfast yesterday there was growing concern over the fate of Mrs Elizabeth Kirkpatrick aged 24 the wife of Heary Kirkpatrick.

She was abducted from her parents' home in West Belfast in June by hooded men. The INLA has threatened to kill her soon. With the release of the Hills, pressure is mounting on the terrorists to carry out their threats or have them revealed as empty threats.

The INLA now know that Mrs Kirkpatrick's capture has not caused her husband to withdraw his evidence. Mr Kirkpatrick wrote to his mother and wife from his cell in the annexe of Crumlin Road jail some time ago saying he wanted nothing more to do with them.

Mirs Eileen Hill (centre) reunited with her husband, Richard, and daughter, Diane, yesterday, and Mrs Elizabeth Kirkpatrick (inset), who is still missing.

legal aid principles

By a Staff Reporter The Government has launched a review of the principles behind legal aid after criticism of the way the system is working. Lord Hailsham, of St Marylebone, the Lord Chancellor, has asked the Legal Aid Advisory Committee to review elegibility limits for civil and criminal aid and the non-financial criteris for the grant of legal aid. Lord Hailsham said: "I am inviting the advisory committee to undertake a fresh look at the basic principles of legal aid".

The last full review of criminal legal aid was that of the Widgery report of 1966; the main source document for civil legal aid is still the Rushcliffe report of 1945. Lord Hailsham said reently that the legal aid service is "cascading out of control". Costs have more than doubled in the past five years, with the Lord Chancellor's department estimating that £300m will be spent in 1983-84.

The review comes in the wake of criticisms that the legal aid system largely restricts action through the courts to the relatively poor and the well-off, leaving out many middle-in-come people.

Free legal aid is available for rivil prodeedings only to those with a capital of less than £2,500 and a disposable income of less than £1,965. Above that, contributions can be made. Those with disposable incomes above £4,720 and capital of £4,000 are usually ineligible.

In civil cases the non-financial criteria include a decision by the Law Society on whether there are reasonable grounds for criminal area the tests laid out in the Widgery report include the consequences for someone if convicted and whether a substantial point of law is at issue. The Legal Action Group, a pressure group of lawyers said last night that it suspected th reference was an attempt to produce cuts in legal aid.

France plays the naughty boy over Chad

"As usual the French want to have it all their way", remarked a disgruntled US official, looking up from a map showing the latest situation in the civil war in Chad. "They don't want to see Libya taking over the place, but are not prepared to do much to prevent this happening, and they become exceedingly resentful when this is pointed out."

is happening in Chad. The US sees the dispute in East-West terms, with Colonel Musmmar Gadaffi, the Libyan leader, as the chief villian who, with Soviet arms, is bent on empirebuilding in Central Africa.

France views it essentially 25 a regional dispute between two nationalist leaders. It wants to isolate it from superpower conflict and also keep open its expanding commercial relations with Libya.

President Government, which has tried to wind down France's traditional role of policing its former African colonies, favours nego-tiating with Libya as the best way of stopping the fighting.
The Americans, however, with strong Egyptian and Sudanese backing, want Colonel Gaddafi to be cut down to size.

The US has been openly critical of France's failure to act quickly and decisively in what President Reagan described as its "sphere of influence," a neocolonial reference which does not go down well in socialist Paris. The delay in the dispatch of French troops and refusal to send fighter aircraft to Chad is seen in Washington as being largely responsible for the recent military successes of the

False prophets

In 1950, weather forecasts were claimed to be 90 per cent accurate, in 1969 between 70 and 80 per cent. and nowadays 85 per cent. It all depends, of course, what you mean by accurate. In New Scientist, Ivor Williams, a Meteorological Office employee for seven years, summarizes his own analysis of the 5.55pm radio forecast for his area, the south-west. He concludes: "Overall, the forecasts hardly seem worthwhile. They were correct on 39 occasions; doubtful on 14 occasions; in error tnot serious) on 13 occasions; and failed on 27 occasions. Leaving out the 14 doubtful forecasts, the total correct was 39 out of 79, about half." Williams says the results astounded him, not only because the reports were so inaccurate, but because they were inadequate in detail and confusingly presented. Perhaps nobody else will be very surprised.

The men who died at dawn

The first was executed on September 8, 1914, shortly after the British Expeditionary Force's sorry retreat from Mons. A private in a Home Counties regiment who had enlisted in Dublin at the age of 17, he was discovered by a gatekeeper hiding in a harn on Baron Edward Rothschild's estate at Tournan. The court martial took place on September 6, the death sentence for desertion was confirmed the following day, and at 6.30am the next morning the news was conveyed to the soldier in the guardroom. Within 45 minutes he was put before a firing squad and

During the next six years, until March 1920, courts martial condemned 3,080 men to death. All but 346 were reprieved. Three of those to die were officers, two for desertion, one for murder. Fourteen of the Chinese and Coloured Labour Corps were shot. The majority of those who died, 291, were imperial troops in the service of His Majesty, and all but 24 of the executions were carried out in France or Belgium.

It is an episode of British military history which has continually provoked an uneasy conscience. The suspicion that the reason behind most of the executions was simply pour encourager les autres has always existed. But the file against those responsible has remained unproven. The close relatives of those shot are now elderly and usually unwilling to open deep, private wounds.

The hard evidence - the transcripts of the courts martial themselves - has stayed firmly out of public view in the archives of the Ministry of Defence. All of them are subject to the 75-year-rule which effectively bans their release for at least a further six years on the grounds that their contents may still offend the living relatives of the

And for those who sought to gnore the circumstantial evidence there was always the great excuse: in a war which cost 8,538,315 soldiers a war which cost 8,338,313 soluters their lives, is there really any justification for agonizing over the fate of a mere 346, 37 of them convicted murderers, and a sizeable proportion of the rest, by the mores of the age, of dubious mettle?

The publication this autumn of For The Sake of Example by Anthony Babington, a circuit judge and himself a decorated veteran of the Second World War, will effectively settle the question of the propriety of those executions.

Babington's book is not startling in its conclusions. It confirms a number of deep-rooted suspicions: the commutation of death sentences, even those with recommendations of mercy, was abandoned at a

Tragedy of the young officer who lost his way

Temporary Sub-Lieutenant Edwin Leopold Arthur Dyett was born into a services family. A forebear on his mother's side, Surgeon Bird, was one of the heroes of the siege of Lucknow during the Indian Mutiny. Both of his grandfathers were colonels who later became Knights of Windsor, honorary positions for old soldiers of distinction.

Dyett's father was a commander in the Royal Navy based in Liverpool as Chief Naval Transport Officer, and a distant cousin to General Sir John French, the Commander-in-Chief of the British Expeditionary Force. It is difficult, then, to exaggerate the anger, pain, and astonishment Commander W.H.R. Dyett must have felt when. in early 1917, he received a brief message informing him that his 21year-old son had been tried for desertion, convicted, and shot at

If by imposing the supreme punishment the British forces were determined to make an officer an example, and there is some evidence which points in this direction, they could hardly have chosen a more unsuitable case. In one respect Dyett's death is typical of many of those executed in that it proves that justice which is tempored by degree is no justice at all. What makes his case remarkable is the furious reaction it caused in his father, and the aftermath of his campaign to clear Edwin Dyett's name.

Babington's book names none of those executed. Inquiries by The Times have, however, traced Dyett's younger sister. Elspeth, now in her seventies and living in Scotland. The file on the Dyett case lies in the records of the assistant provost marshal of the Royal Naval Division. When the rest of the RND's First World War archives were declassified in 1965, that file remained closed under a 100-year

Through his sister, and other sources, it has been possible to establish the disquieting circumstances surrounding Dyett's execution, and its impact on the debate over service executions which ensued after the war. Until the files are opened, it will be impossible to discover how far Commander Dyett succeeded in clearing his son's name. In 1919, Dyett told his family that he was satisfied that Edwin had been exonerated. Still bitter over the execution, he took his family to America, renounced British citizenship, and never set foot in England again. The only legacy of the family in service history now is the effect that Edwin's execution had on future military policy. He had entered the services while PHS a midshipman on a Merchant Navy moment's notice if military objec-tives demanded it; rules designed to give the accused a fair hearing were flaunted; many medical officers flatly refused to recognize that shell shock represented a real psychiatric condition which ought to be regarded as mitigation in cases of

Where the book finally destroys the notion of justice for the accused in the First World War is in its sources. Babington was the first writer to be given access to the trial transcripts. Even though he has been strictly bound not to name individual cases, the official records themselves have proved sufficiently damning for the case against the military bureaucracy to be estab-lished beyond reasonable doubt. In Babington's own words:

"Viewed by the standards of today few of the executed men received the most elemental form of justice. They were tried and sentenced by courts which often regarded themselves as mere components of the penal process and which, until the final year of the war, were asked to perform a complex judicial function without any sort of legal guidance. The cases for the accused were seldom presented adequately and sometimes were never presented at all. If crucial matters were raised which might have established their innocence they were rarely investi-gated by members of the court . . . if soldiers accused of cowardice or of desertion in the face of the enemy had looked to the medical officers for assistance or compassion then they were likely to have looked in vain. The army doctors as a whole seem to have set themselves up as an extra branch of the provost corps, intent on securing the extreme out the rationale in a note to his divisional commander: "Every infantry officer of experience will confirm my opinion that there comes a point when men will risk imprisonment or penal servitude rather than carry on their ordinary duty ... the execution of a man has a salutary effect on the bad and weak characters (in resisting temptation).

In 1930, after a tortuous path through the political machinery, legislation was passed which made treachery and mutiny the only military offences punishable with death. During the Second World War, only four executions for military offences took place, three for mutiny, and one for treachery. Babington surmises: "One reason for this might have been that most of the higher commanders had learnt the lessons of leadership whilst serving as junior officers on the brutal and blood-sodden wastes of the Western Front, Perhaps they realized that there are better ways of controlling men in action than by resorting to a discipline of fear."

One of the most graphic descriptions of an execution on the Western Front was given by Dr. M. S. Esler who served as a medical officer in the Royal Army Medical Corps. Esler, as recorded in the Imperial War Museum's oral history section. was instructed to pin a piece of coloured fiannel over the condemned man's heart to provide a target for the firing squad

"Two men came and led him out of the hut where he'd been guarded all night. As he left the hut his legs gave way; then one could see the fear entering his heart. Rather than marched to the firing spot he was dragged along. When we got there he had his hands tied behind his back, he was put against a wall, his eyes were bandaged and the firing squad were given the order to fire. "I wondered at the time: "What on earth will happen if they miss him and they don't kill him completely? And I was very anxious about that, but when they fired he fell to the ground writhing as all people do— even if they've been killed they have this reflex action of writhing about which goes on for some minutes.

"I didn't know whether he was dead or not, but at that moment the sergeant in charge stepped forward, put a revolver to his head and blew his brains out."

The experience did not shake Esler. When he was asked if he thought the death penalty was justified, he replied: "I think it was absolutely essential. they (the men) would have begun to feel that you only had to walk off during a-battle and then come back afterwards and you escaped death or mutilation... I think it was a against him was universally disliked. Commander Dyett later told his family that the man had fallen of with Edwin when Dyett caught him sneaking women into the training barracks at Blandford, Dorset. This piece of circumstantial evidence is backed up, remarkably enough, by the unpublished memoirs of a clerk at 189th Brigade HQ, Thomas

After the order for Dyett's execution was confirmed - in the face of a recommendation for mercy on two counts, his youth and inexperience and the prevailing circumstances which would have affected any young officer "unless he had a strong character" - Macmillan passed the news to his superiors. Dyett was executed, and some days later records of the case crossed Macmillan's desk.

"I had only time to glance over them...but my hasty perusal sufficed to disclose who the witnesses for the prosecution were, and from that moment I resolved to shun them both, for one of them was none other than the Petty Officer who shaped so badly (in an earlier campaign), and the other an officer for whom I had a very poor regard."

Macmillan wondered if Dyett was the first martyr to the clamour from the ranks for an example to be made of an officer for desertion, a clamour, he acknowledged, which was totally justified.

"If however, they were forced to act, why did they select a mere boy for their first victim? It was obvious that the lad had been commissioned to control men before he had learned to control himself. Surely there were senior officers who had been guilty of desertion or cowardice - officers whose age, experience, and responsibility made their crime so much more reprehensible."

The night before his execution, Dyett wrote to his mother: "My sorrow is for the trouble I have caused you and dad. I feel for you so much and I am sorry for bringing dishonour upon you all." The battalion chaplain, who witnessed the execution by firing squad, later wrote to Dyett's family to tell them of the burial. "I to tell them of the burial. "I accompanied his body in an ambulance-car several miles away to a beautiful little cemetery, near a small town quite close to the sea, and here we buried him with a Church of England service." The grave is in a communal cemetery at Le Crotoy on the Somme estuary a few miles from Abbeville.

Dyett's death was later taken up by Horatio Bottomley in his magazine John Bull, anonymously and somewhat sensationally. A.P. Herbert, an adjutant in another 189th brigade unit who knew most of the details of the Dyett case and discussed it with Commander Dyett after the war, used it as the basis for his book The Secret Battle, which documents the story of an heroic soldier who is eventually shot for desertion.

Herbert's book, in which the central character is called Harry Penrose, ends with the words: "That is the gist of it; that my friend Harry was shot for cowardice - and he was one of the bravest men I ever

The public concern which followed Herbert's book and Bottomley's revelations eventually changed the law on military executions. But this brought no Edmund Akenhead the crossword compilers.

Together they provide an interesting example of symbiosis, and now that Collins Dictionaries have indertaken the sponsorship of the annual crossword championships we may expect to find the effect of crosswords on dictionaries and vice versa becoming more marked.

How about a new "usage label" to join (colloq), (slang), (joc), (derog) and (vulg) in the form of (cwp) for "crossword puzzles"? This could appear with e.g. "bower=violinist". "flower=river, Po, Exe, Pal, Ure, Dee, Lea etc", "lower=cow", "shower=demonstrator" and "tower=breakdown recovery vehicle" – it is extraordinary how many -ow words end themselves to such duplicity. Some dictionaries are created almost exclusively for crossword solvers and compilers. Such a one is solvers and compilers. Such a one is The Anagram Dictionary by Michael Curl, recently published at £2.95 by Papermac, the paperback division of Macmillan. I looked to see if it had anything to add to "Derange grandee, angered and enraged by exploding grenade" and it had - the grandee should of course have been en garde; "angered" and "enraged" form what the author calls cognate anagrams, or anagrams which define each other. In addition to such well-known oldies as "Honor est a Nilo" for "Horatio Nelson" and "Flit on, cheering angel" for "Florence Nightingale", there are some up-to-date ones. You may make your choice between "That great charm-er" and "Meg, the arch tartar" (8,8) for one of these (no prizes offered). Throughout the years of the crossword championship competi-tors have known that the diction-aries I have relied on have been the Concise Oxford and the Chambers 20th Century. Old-time navigators used to take three chronometers to provide a majority decision should one of them fail to keep proper time, and now the Collins English Dictionary has been added to make a trio of referees. Solvers of Times puzzles, however, need not think that they should have all these dictionaries since it is only very rarely that a word is used that does not appear in all three. They may be relieved to hear that my own reference books do not include that realistic Moscow's policies is the first step comes clear. towards organizing a coherent. It makes little sense to spend defence. The need for an adequate military budget is generally acknowledged, even if the precise level and distribution of expenditure is hotly debated. Less widely realized, however, is that armed force is only one of the options pursued by the Soviet leaders to promote what they argue is an inevitable transition from capitalism to Soviet-style socialism.

The numerous Soviet espionage operations uncovered in the West are dismissed by many as no worse than the activities of Western intelligence services against the USSR. Yet unlike the closed society of the USSR the very freedoms enjoyed by the public in the West make it open to penetration. When spies are discovered in top-secret government departments, proposals for positive vetting are debated but widely dismissed as unnecessary. Agents of influence are revealed in government, business, and media circles but are usually regarded as insignificant in their impact on policy. Of course it would be absurd to try to defend Western values by suppressing freedom: but the only alternative is to make every effort to expose and combat the damage caused by negligence. The Soviet authorities go to great effort and expense to spread misleading propaganda. British schools and colleges receive free of charge Novasti periodicals and booklets, exagperating every positive aspect of oviet life and suppressing all he shortcomings, while at the ame time crudely distorting the policies of Western governments. Much of this material is primitive, even counter-productive. Yet when even the respected Encyclopedia Britannica the country's wealth on weapons of mass destruction which, as deterrents, it is hoped never to use, while simultaneously trying to economize by reducing the educational budget for Russian studies or cutting the external services of the BBC. Education about the Soviet system and information about its impact on world events form a vital part of our defence and are cheap in comparison with tanks and missiles.

The repeated acts of Soviet repression in the countries of Eastern Europe refirte the theory that by expanding trade based on cheap credit it might prove possible to woo them from the Soviet empire. Moscow has retained control, while the Western banking system has suffered considerable losses. Other approaches seem more hopefulin pursuing some loosening of the Soviet grip. By the Helsinki Accords and other international agreements the West has the right, indeed the duty, to expand the flow of information, encouraging free thought, supporting those who campaign for human rights and furthering the drive to establish independent trade union movements.

With Soviet troops fighting in Afghanistan it would be valuable to extend Western broadcasting to the major nationalities not yet covered by programmes in their own languages. The clandestine samizdat journals are already questioning why nations in the USSR which are themselves suffering from oppression should send their sons to die in a colonialist war. These doubts can be given much wider circulation through radio broadcasts. Moscow denounces truthcontains entries by Soviet ful Western reporting as provoauthors which are far from cation or psychological warfare, presenting life in the USSR as it but it is sufficient response to really is, the need for some cite by way of contrast the distorted Soviet broadcasting on Northern Ireland. Western society thrives on open debate, while the Soviet leadership fears all free discussion.

Coordination of military defence has largely been achieved through Nato, but there is little sign of a coherent policy on economic matters. The US-Soviet grain deals, the gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe, supplying high technology on low-interest loans, are only a few of the many issues on which agreement has been sadly lacking. The United States. Western Europe and Japan must act in closer cooperation if the threat of sanctions is to have any restraining influence on Soviet expansionism. Measures to prevent Soviet acquisition of technology with military applications should be strengthened. Even if restricted materials can still be acquired by illegal means, the cost to Moscow in scarce hard currency is greatly increased.

In economic aid to the Third World the Soviet record is poor; the USSR is better able to supply weapons and promote conflict. New Marxist-Leninist regimes benefit from Soviet experience in preserving their political power. but Moscow is not a useful source of advice or aid in solving economic problems. The West has much more to offer and could preempt Soviet involvement by promoting economic development and democratic government in countries threatened by internal strife. Too often ignorance of local politics has led to incorrect assessments and failure to act in time. The countries of the West have many faults, but they also have the freedom to discuss and correct them. We have no walls or fences to stop mass emigration; our problem, on the contrary, is to stem immigration from less fortunate lands. To continue to prosper, however, we need foresight and resolution, and we need them now.

Latvian nationalism

From Mr Andrei Dubrovsky Sir, Nationalism is "the most nowerful chemical solvent" which is soing to bring the Soviet Union rashing down in ruins, writes Mr demard Levin in his article on Soviet Latvia (August 8). Very dramatic Mr Levin! - will the Soviet Union survive until next week?

Well, the Larvian Soviet Socialist.
Republic was certainly doing fine the week Mr Levin was typing out his awful prophecies of doors. I was there, on holiday, just prior to coming to London. I can report that all appeared caim and I found the people proud, hospitable and - dare i say it - happy. Living standards in Latvia seemed to me, if anything, higher than in other parts of the Soviet Union.

But what about the ruthless crushing of Latvian nationalism? Latvian as a language is compulsory in schools and all other educational establishments. There are nine professional theatres, national film studios and TV and radio channels all using the Latvian language. Quality of teaching

From Mr J. R. Northeast Sir, There can be no disguising the unease that will arise from the Secretary of State for Education's latest intentions. The report from your Education Correspondent (August 11) is very disturbing to those in the sharp end of school operation.

Presonably, very large schools such as this one command larger and more varied resources than national language.

Incidentally, a remark made to others. Nevertheless, the economics of me by an old man in Riga remains in my mind. "We did not establish its feet with very large classes, especially at the very demanding A level. In no way can time be spared for general class teaching by these specialists.

Who, therefore, will teach these so-called economic "facts of life"? Teachers in cognate areas such as sociology and history are unlikely to welcome this opportunity. We are then faced with a teaching activity of less than good quality.

Further, if history has sometimes raised doubts concerning exposure to bias, what a fruitful field is offered by economic doctrines. Lastly, as your correspondent so rightly points out, what do we throw out in order to make room for this? There is already a very wide gulf between those who make and control broad policy in Westminster and those who execute it at the other end. I remain equally concerned that the Prime Minister's new education

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Familiar ring of empire building

From Mr Matthew Parris, MP for Sir, It is amusing to run through today's leading article ("The Soviet Challenge" August 18) reading "1883" for "1983" and "The British Empire" for "The Soviet Union".

The references to Afghanistan sound familiar. The reference to Czechoslovakia would be out of place – but then the South African War (self-defence, of course!) still lay ahead. We were quietly elbowing our way into Southern Rhodesia at the time.

The attention you devote to the repressive domestic policy of the Great Power would be inappropriate: we were a free people, and it is interesting to ask whether that made us less dangerous to the foreign governments which got in our way.

MATTHEW PARRIS,

Community health initiatives are in the main, a reaction to a National Health Service that is overwhelm-ingly a service to the sick rather than a service to keep people healthy. The sickness service dominates political debate about the nation's health and it devours the vast majority of resources allocated to health.

There are, today, well over one thousand community health groups. They are concerned with the prevention of ill-health through suitable diet and exercise, health education, pre and post-natal care, sharing experience of the manage-ment of, for example, depression or drug dependency, or mental illness, women's health needs and so on.

It has been argued that some acute hospital services might be transferred to the community, for example that a proportion of heart attack victims derive little benefit from hospital treatment and that many current surgical operations could be on an outpatient basis or with overnight admission only.

I am glad that the DHSS has recently funded a unit to provide report was thorough and its recommendations balanced the interests of medical practitioners, chiropractors and the public. This, I Community Health Initiatives with the National Council for Voluntary Organisations.

One of our goals is to win the co-operation of the medical profession so that community health initiatives, as much as alternative treatments for ill-health, can be seen to be a complementary part of a service that might then more appropriately be called a national health service.

LSO's programming

From the Chairman of The London Symphony Orchestra

Sir, Having just returned from a highly successful visit to the Salzburg Festival it is with some dismay that we hear from Mr Bryan Appleyard, (July 25) that we could be responsible for "radical up-heaval" and "profound consequences" in the serious music industry as a result of our current negotiations with The Barbican Centre about our future artistic policy in our home in the City of London.

We are indeed in the process of negotiating our future in The Barbican. As the only London orchestra with a home we have built on this privilege and keenly feel our responsibility and artistic commitment to the City of London and to our audiences.
Our "lack lustre" list of conductors in the last year has included our. music director, Claudio Abbado, Sir Cotin Davis, Rafael Kubelik and Bolshoi director Yuri Simonov. Our "poor programming" has included two performances of Stockhausen's masterpiece for three orchestras Gruppen which is rarely attempted anywhere in the world, a Brahms cycle under Kubelik described as "among the season's outstanding musical events" (The Guardian), and all the major works of Tippett and Berlioz.

Our first commitment is an artistic one. Since everything we have done so far has been breaking new ground, some ideas have inevitably worked better than others. We are obviously considering a closer identity with The Barbican and we are continuously researching the questions of pro-gramming, starting times, promotion, audience development and

Sir, How effective is your reported reduction (August 13) in the 70 mph speed limit for coaches likely to be?

Most modern vehicles can and do travel on motorways at speeds far greater than the law allows. Any unusually law-abiding motorist who drives on the inside lane of a motorway at less than 70 mph will frequently find himself being over-frequently find himself being overtaken by a fully-laden heavy lorry driven at 80 mph, which is in turn being overtaken by a fully laden coach driven at 90 mph.

When a vehicle collides with an object, the damage done to the object - a car or a group of human beings - is related to the energy dissipated on impact. This energy is directly proportional to the square directly proportional to the square of the velocity of the vehicle. So a coach weighing 10 times more than a passenger car and moving at 70 mph compared with a car's 50 mph needs to dissipate on impact about 20 times as much energy.

For a coach moving at 90 mph the figure is more than 30 times. It is little wonder, therefore, that the extent of human injury from coach collisions is so devastasting, and more than likely that a general reduction in the speed of heavy vehicles would save a considerable number of lives.

Sir, I second your suggestion (August 10) that the Met Office and British Telecom come together to provide a weather information service that is paid for via the telephone bill. But British Telecom should do the same for anyone wanting to provide information for a fee over the phone.

For example, placing a small ad in a newspaper and ploughing through columns of such ads is a very inefficient method of matching buver and seller compared to the speed with which a computer can do the job. But computerized markets like this will not really come into their own until there is an equally cheap method for information seeker to pay the information provider, that is by crediting the telephone account of one and Freedom needs a moral framework

Lord Chief Justice, was reported to be thinking along similar lines to the Prime Minister grea when she pleaded for a return to Victorian values. She appeared to have the spirit of private enterprise especially in mind. Lord Lane referred to the need for social sanctions to combat crime and violence, and deplored the present disregard for the Ten Commandments. To describe anything in art, architecture or attitudes to life as Victorian until comparatively recently was a term of abuse. Lytton Strachey in his Eminent Victorians, published in 1918, sowed the seed of this revulsion in the minds of many who grew up between the two world wars. After reading his subtle denigration of previously esteemed characters some claimed to have been liberated from a cult of hero worship that had been unjustifiably forced upon them. As a consequence of that violent reaction, especially among the influential intelli-Mr Barry Norman, 50: Mr Sam Toy, 50: Lieutenant-General Sir Richard Vickers, 55: Mr Mike Weston, 45. gentsia, the maxims contained, for example, in Self Help, written by Dr Samuel Smiles (1812-1904) came to be held up to ridicule. A striking expression of confidence in the social effects of British inventiveness and technology.

Any favourable appraisal of Victorian values and morality naturally requires careful presentation. Some suspect in it a nostalgia for the unacceptable face of the Britain described by Charles Dickens. But it must be remembered that he, a truly eminent Victorian, together with another, namely Charles Kingsley, were champions of the rights of childhood and the underdog in general. A serious debate about the distinctive values of nineteenth-century Britain would be a healthy stimulus in helping us 10 determine what those are which we ought to uphold today. If we approach the subject of alues and morality as values

Christians we need to understand that Jesus insisted on absolute standards in his teaching about the kingdom of God. Without those his call to repentance and offer of forgiveness would be meaningless.

Prevarication, however, on that point within the churches has been unsettling to society as a whole. It has helped to undermine the very basis of democracy, which lacks democracy, which lacks cohesion without a moral ideology. Freedom by itself can be more of a curse than a blessing if dishonesty, selfishness and corruption are unrestrained.

Jesus built on the tradition he inherited from the Old Testament prophets. Their religious stance was inextricably linked with the highest ethical qualities. He completed but did not supersede their ministry. provided a universal criterion for human personal and social bahaviour.

Just as we have powers of reasoning and organs of sense we are also endowed with a faculty that can enable us to distinguish between what is right and wrong in any course of action. To admit that faculty is fallible bears out the need for instruction and training. A genuine criterion must be fined to any particular age. It is that by which actions and events stand to be measured. Its application cannot be imposed from without. Guidelines of law are necessary like the Highway Code, which can tell us only how, not where, to travel. In the end, our direction in life is clarified through learning to listen to promptings within our

BBCSO/Howarth Albert Hall/Radio 3

The first half of Thursday's Prom, long though it was, showed masterly design in projecting us in stages out of the suffocation of a heatwave Albert Hall. First there was a jaunt down the road to Ham-mersmith, for Hoist's eponymous prelude and scherzo in its' original scoring for military

After this it was out into the country to hear Vaughan Williams's Lark Ascending, and to hear the bird indeed in Iona Brown's beautiful playing of the violin solo. There was the feel of feather in the touch of her bow, something perfectly formed and soft, yet very present, and her aerial phrasing was alive and right in every detail, not least the personal addition fo a glissando to prove one was not imagining it all.

Then, mounting in orchestral size, duration and every other dimension, the concert moved from an idealized Norfolk to an idealized everywhere in David Lumsdaine's Hagoromo. This was commissioned by the BBC and first played by its sym-phony orchestra in Paris six years ago, but somehow it had never happened in Britain before, which has been very much our loss. Indeed, not for quite some years, since the first performance of Peter Maxwell Davies's A Mirror of Whitening Light, have I heard a new orchestral piece so stunning and so rich in new experience.

The only thing wrong with it soon is its ugly title, borrowed from a noh play that provided some

CBSO/Rattle

Festival Hall

Simon Rattle set out on Thursday to bring his orchestra's Sibelius cycle to London and South Bank Summer Music; and he set out right at the stark, dark heart of the of the composer with the Fourth Symphony.

Only an orchestra with the music of Sibelius so deep under its skin as the City of Birmingnam Symphony (the cycle was recently performed by it at the Varwick Arts Centre) could have penetrated that heart so deeply. Each solo part had been sifted to a weight and density perfectly to articulate each raw line, and then blended in patternings of texture and harmonic movement which can still deeply shock the system.

It was Sibelius's high regard for Berlinz that came to mind in first searing violin phrase to the mocking ease of the woodwind flurries, a caprice written with the point of a needle if ever there were one.

The other symphony of the evening, about the same length but with twice as many notes was No 1 in E minor the second and third follow on Sunday, Its no less extraordi-nary beginning seemed folded in one long gesture to the first great fortissimo chord; and it was Rantle's ability to pace, modify and control each climax throughout the work that gave initial stimulus. In the play according to Lumsdaine, an angel dances for two fishermen and reveals to them anew the beauty of the natural world. What happens in the compo sition is that the orchestra is made to dance, and to reveal for itself and for its audience, its own beauty in a thousand new sheets of string and wind tone dappled with pitched per-cussion as a Klimt is dappled with gold. There are tangled, tendrilled growths in the large woodwind ensemble, distant summonses from muted trumpets, glittering cascades from a body of seven metallophones and xylophones.

There are also two features that keep the work from being the empty self-indulgent fantasy all this might imply. The first is that Lumsdaine's imaginary landscape has a searching critical human presence, notice able at moments of aggression in the drums or more generally in the angular melody. The second is that Hagoromo follows very much its own COURSE.

With these materials Lumsdaine could easily have created a much more piece: the boos mixed with the measure of his achievement in avoiding any resounding rhetoric in favour of huse harmonic movements that simply disappear, so underground. They are unlikely to be better played than they were here by the BBC SO under Elgar Howarth, but they will surely be emerging again this performance so much of its draining intensity.

To single out any section of an orchestra in as fine form as the CBSO may seem perverse; but it was a rare pleasure to hear a body of strings freed to let the score speak through them rather brushing the second movement into life or biting into the finale's surging momentum.

Rather like a Russian doll, a second concert was hidden inside what was already quite enough to digest for one evening But, unlike the doll, Jessva Norman's orchestral song recital was by no means the next size down. Three Strauss songs of rest.

Sean Rea's Sparafucile makes a less potent impression than he should, though it is soundly sung; Shelagh Squires' Giovanna, also new to the cast, has yet to find a firmness of characterization and voice. But Arthur Davies' "Duke" has the strident voice to match his character (if he can restrain a couple of Michael Palin mannerisms) and John Rawnsley's Rigoletto, a magnificent Miller-inspired magnificent Miller-inspired portrayal of emotional and physical bitterness, is searing, Mark Elder conducts vigorous ly, and the orchestra compares favourably (as Ernest Newman once put it) with those of the New York picture houses.

People just say it will.

Both the major submissions make the assumption that local radio, in the sense in which it exists in the country, is a meaningful notion for a condomeration as big and as ragmented as London. Capital sees itself as "a forum for London" with its listeners sharing news and expressing Metropolitan writes of a "rounded service reflecting the makeup, the interests and the aspirations of the total potential udience". Neither Capital nor LBC has actually been able to provide this in the last 10 years in fact, one thing that always strikes me about LBC's early morning sequence AM is that it actually suggests less sense of community than Radio 4's air of a man showing a national Today. There is really no reason to believe that anyone is going to be able to do

Elsewhere, nervousness over the next set of United States money supply figures - expected to be poor - caused buyers to hold off before the weekend. The FT 30 share index fell from yesterday's peak by 3.2 points to 735.7.

Stylo, formerly Stylo shoes, remained a whisker below its 130p peak for the year ahead of next month's special shareholders' meeting to decide if the company, controlled by the Ziff family, can buy back its own shares. The market says the shares are really worth £4, but so far Stylo is saying nothing.

London Brick became the centre of takeover speculation eserday as the idea arose that Tarmac may bid for the company, London shares firmed 3p to 84p. The idea is that once Tarmac has floated off its oil subsidiary, the money will used to acquire London States acquisitions.

Tarmac directors were not available yesterday for com-ment but they said earlier in the week that the oil float-off was on the cards. London Brick reports figures next Wednesday when its intentions towards Ibstock Johnsen - its bid was cleared last Wednesday - is expected to be announced.

Commoners who are Lords-in-waiting

From bankers to blacksmiths. carpenters to commuters, village cricket is the great leveller.

John Parker visits Troon for the semi-final of a national contest with the prize a ticket to Lord's Troon, Sixteen hundred souls housed in rows of little granite cottages built a century and more ago for the tin miners of Cornwall. Now there is 19 per cent unemployment typified by the derelict pitheads dotting the treeless landscape; but they have been inactive since the depression of the 1920s and kept so by the politicians and the microchip revolution. A Langleybury. A hamlet set in the lush Hertfordshire countryside just 23 miles from Charing Cross. Commuterland, Two hundred people live here, collected around a crossroads, a church, a pub. And a cricket

i don't suppose either village would have known where to find the other on an Ordnance until couple of weeks ago. But last Sunday Langleybury gathered its cricket bags and supporters and decamped by air, coach, train and car some 340 miles to Cornwall for the semi-final round of the Whitbread National Village Cricket cham-pionships. Far away the Yorkshire village of Sessay was preparing in like manner to do battle with the invaders from Quaradon in Derbyshire.

The prize: the cricketer's dream, a place in the final at Lord's on Sunday, August 28. Troon have made the trek there three times since the competition began 11 years ago, and have come away winners each time. Langleybury have been - losing semi-finalists three times already and now giving it a fourth go.

The two teams have never met, but Troon, for all their engineers, potters, fitters and experience, are worried. They turners, a driving instructor, a don't think the the omens are good. They have had an easy run through the seven matches of the competition so far, but they don't think they are quite the force they used to be.

Troon - and to thousands of other villages across the country - the game is a religion. On the way up to the trim field from the impressive clubhouse he tells the story: how the club was founded in 1875, its early successes drawing enthusiastic all the team, except one, came back from the 1914-18 trenches; how the club became socially and psychologically vital to the village through the slump of the 1920s and the 1930s, rescuing noons from the misery of closes the bank manager's everyday life on the dole, and how it is performing the same swinging yorker. people on their Saturday after-service nowadays. "How much would you say this clubhouse is worth?" he asks, pointing to the long, low building with its two bars, and snooker room: comfortably, almost houriously, furnished. "Thirty, forty thousand?" his eyes flush again. It cost us under £6,000. We did all the work ourselves. A local farmer gave us the land on condition we built within five years and included a proper snooker room. The old village room was falling to bits. We raised the cash and did it all well within the time. Then we used the profits from the bar to build the new pavilion; and the last thing we did was to put up.

the new scoreboard. The scoreboard is indeed is the taboo word, and the Langleybury advance grand has towards the wicketkeeper's face. I hope the wicketkeeper's face. The state of the body found out that two of Dobner snatches, and drops it. Troom's leading players are Groams from Langleybury, sighs because they have played Minor Counties cricket. Most sus-concerned grammes" - team lists - haven't arrived. They cannot charge an entry fee to the ground on Sundays, any more than they can at Lord's, but possession of a programme at 50p a time is supposed to get round that little legal difficulty. But it is only 10 o'clock, and there are a couple of hundred people who have not yet been separated from their 50ps.

By 11 o'clock the Troon clubhouse is filling me and the clubhouse is filling up, and the village is alive with Langleybury supporters of all ages, some sporting Watford Football Club T-shirts. Home counties twang mingles with the slow western burr, the beer flows and the possing grows bolder. At 12.44 pm precisely the big-coach rolls in carrying the visiting team and affiliating the visiting team and officials. They have flown from Luton to Newquay courtesy of the sponsors, and look menacingly refreshed by their picnic lunch on the beach.

By now the crowd is more then a thousand and swelling all the time as Troon's followers arrive from distant villages. There is a bozz of excitement as the teams come out for their pre-match warm-up. Langley-bury look big, blond and professional as they flip catches to each other. Troon's black curiy sideburns and swarthy skins signal the contrast. Langleybury's team consists of quantity surveyors, managers of sports shops, builders and accountants. I room a cor farmer and a carpenter. On both sides ages range from 17 to the mid-forties.

Terry Carter, Troon's skipper finals, wins the toss and elects Never mind, it's only a same, to but. In the third over he gets a lifting bell from Shain Palmer, Langleybury's quickie, swings wildly at it and is well caught behind the wicket off his gloves. Nine for one soon becomes 13 for two as the Langleybury bowlers turn the screw. Bryan Carter, Terry's brother and "the best but in Comwall", spoons a "grannie catch" to young Paul Trussell at mid-wicket. Troon gloom is deepened by Langleybury en-thusiasm. Both their key batsman out for one run between

Try as he may, bank manager John Spry can do little to improve Troon's run balance and his partner Steve Kitchen, the potter, is living up to his calling. The overs tick away as Troon's innings goes into slow monon Two chestmut horses poke their noses over the wall inquisitively, but soon back off. Cricket bores some people, too. A resolutely cheerful bunch of Troon teenagers push a wheel-barrow round the boundary, laden with cans (30p), Panda Drops (14p), crisps (10p), and support from the villagers, how sandwiches (30p). They do a roaring trade, particularly as there's no beer tent on the ground. (What? With Whitbread as sponsors?) Suddenly, the silver-haired Brian Davey, Langleybury chairman and opening bowler, Enter Scott Pedlar, stocky, fresh-faced and in his twenties a carpenter by trade. He takes a quick look at Davey and drives him forcefully to the cover bondary, shattering the tense

At 20 overs, the orange juice comes out in best Lord's fashion. But the score is only 53, and the game is going Langleybury's way. A queue forms round the back of the pavilion for the only gentle-men's facility, and a burly, bearded figure known as "Birdseye" enlivens the proceedings by amouncing: "If this bloody hat would only hold water I wouldn't have had to wait in

After the re-start, Pedlar swishes and misses more than imposing one which many a he connects. Kitchen defends county ground would be proud of and it is an object of inacrest to the Langleybury supporters already ringing the playing area with their cars and pacadicing on the soft, browning grass. "Very professional," says a lady disapprovingly. "Professional" is the tabun, seed and the

The National Village Cricket championship had been organized by The Cricketer magatine since 1972. The first sponsor was Haig Whisky, who promised a three-year run and stayed for six. Thes Haig moved up-market to the club championship and Whithread took over the sponsorship with equivalent success. It has

This year's final is between Troop from Cornwall and Quaradon from Derbyshire, at Lord's tomorrow week. The match will begin at 2pm and will consist, like all the champion-ship matches, of 40 overs a side. No bowler may exceed nine overs, and in the event of a tie the number of wickets lost is taken into account or, failing that, the scoring rate. Now it is a battle of attrition. The score creeps up as slowly as had Troon's. Terry Carter begins to switch his bowlers around, and Stave Pedlar gets a ball to lift and leave the edge of Walford's bat for a comfortable wicketkeeper's catch. Forty-four for four off 19 overs. Terry Carter makes an athletic swooping stop and comes racing off the field. "Split my pants", he grins, but he is a quick-change artist as well and he is back at the end of the over. Hardy, battling grimly, is on 21 and Martin Brown, fluently lefthanded, has caught him up with three Gower-like fours. Langleybury are beginning to accelerate menacingly when Brian Carter whips a ball back from the boundary and with a one-handed, one-movement scoop James has the bails off to run out Hardy. Cradia of Conscience - Pater Newbold *****

THE OPEN ROAD opened the land. I was in no hurry. I took five days over the drive. I have enjoyed lots of things as much as, but never that the curvature of the earth is as evident as it is at sea. Out of the towns, the houses are represented by names on a mail box by the road. The house columns that branch out at the itself lies miles deep in a fold of the land. The map prints the names of some of these farms as though they were townships, which must be why I drove through Tittybong and Towaninnie without noticing them. Sometimes I stopped to relish doesn't last longer than you want) of being alone in it, without a soul in the world knowing where I was at that particular moment. A wind not a strong one, but somehow clouds a huge one - a wind hundreds of moved across the sky. The far miles wide, blew across the land and rattled the leaves of the gum trees. People, anonymous in cars, passed infrequently. I heard the car coming long before I saw it; a faint whine a village. I caught a glimpse of a swelling to a roar and a frightful Victorian Gothic church in dark yelling tumult as it hurtled past some commemorating British founders, some derived from the native names, some from incidents: Koorong Swamp; Turn-Back-Jimmy Donald: Poisoned Waterhole Creek. At Ballarat's gold diggings and Swan Hill (once a big inland port), history has been reserved and reconstructed. I had a fascinating day in these places, but for me the continuity of history is more real in a town such as Forbes, where I pulled up on a baking, autumn Faster Saturday. Forbes began as a farming settlement, but went mad for a few years when gold was discovered in 1861 in what is now the King George V memorial park. The population rushed up to 40,000. Then mining the gold became too complicated and most of the population rushed away again, leaving behind some fine nineteenth-century anything more than these days of moving on through this ocean of land, which is so vast, achitecture in the style that these country towns are still quite rich in. The balconies run unbroken round the building, supported through ground and upper floors by slender iron > top into delicate lacy ironwork. The Vandenberg Hotel was such a place. Here were the odd 200 of Forbes' population of 8,200, pouring Foster's and Toohey's lager beer down their throats and shouting conversation over the uproar of a thundering juke-box. The men ed informally in singlets or T-shirts, "stubbles" (shorts) or "strides" (longs). thick boots or thong sandals. In my linen jacket and trousers, shirt, socks and shoes, I must have stood out, to use a vivid Australian simile, like a onelegged man at an arse-kicking

I wished, as on earlier trips under, that someone could invent and promote a better informal hot climate for men. The drab stubbies do not belong. They are the sort of thing holiday campers in the north of England used to wear in the thirties when the sun came out. A hard fact is that hairy legs and pale skins, once tanned, need bright colours to display them. Yet the formal hot weather dress of Australian and New Zealand men, consisting of shorts, white full-length socks, polished shoes, white shirt, tie and light jacket, is extremely attractive. I wore it myself sometimes, and could not repress a start of gratification when I saw myself reflected in a shop window.

Before I left Forbes I took a walk through the park. There was more history here, as in all towns through all of Australia and New Zealand, in the names on the memorials of the young men who left them. Young men who went, no doubt, more as a high-spirited lark than as dedicated soldiers of the Empire, to fight in the Empire's wars and did not return.

In between the cities, Austrameasure distances in not miles. Traffic is "Narrandera 100km" sparse. It was Good Friday. Barney, the host of the Fig Tree Motel, took me to the bowling club, explaining that it was one of the two places in town where you could get a drink without having to cat a meal. At 5.30pm, the portrait of the Queen looked down on a thriving and exuberant scene. Perhaps because there were lots dress was noticeably more formal. Somebody told Barney something as we entered, at which he looked grave. "The wife's got some trouble at home, Peter. The refrigerator's flood-ing all over the kitchen." He considered the priorities. Reckon we'll have to have a drink and then go."

Barney said that the new drink-drive laws, which introduced random breath tests and lowered the permitted limit to 50 milligrams per thousand (in Britain the limit is 80) had reduced these clubs to shadows of their former selves. They had evidently not affected the dinner trade in his restaurant. He had taken on a spare waiter, whose conversation there was the essence of the Australia I dote on. "Do you want something to drink?" he asked, when he had taken my order. "Is there a wine you recom-mend?" "I'm a beer drinker myself. I wouldn't have a clue. This last phrase, is used cheerfully by Australians and New Zealanders. They applied it to such of my questions as:

"What time does the bottle store open?"; "Which one is the Southern Cross?"; "Am I right for Marrangaroo?" Next morning was Easter Sunday, the last day of my drive. Leaving Orange, the road began to climb between ranges of green hills, curved as gently times bigger. Then the range ended The road began to spiral downhill in wide, shallow curves, presenting at each turn a enough to halt my breath. Back in London when I was planning this journey, I had looked forward to this section through the mountains as the romantic as well as geographical peak; but one cannot always be lucky. It began to min just outside Lithgow, where the Great Western Highway follows the discoverers' track, and a smaller road promised less Faster traffic and more spectacular views.

I stopped at a cafe to ask a "bikie" (Australian for motor-cyclist), his leather outfit stiff with studs and CND badges, which route he recommended. He replied: "It doesn't matter, mate. They'll both be closed in

So I took the upper road through Richmond and Wind-sor, and it was as he said. All I saw of the Blue Mountains was dripping trees along the roadside and beyond that, a wall of grey. This was, I was told, typical of the region in autumn. I joined the stream of cars, full of disappointed families, driving back to Sydney in the rain, through the suburbs that sound so English - Hornsby, Ealing, Chatswood. In the morning, Sydney was itself again. I drove into the city and across the Harbour Bridge (with a tremendous inward gloat) on one of those glorious blue days that make Sydney the most beautiful city in the world. orious blue days of the most of days later; and that Glenisla began at Melbourne, for it was from there in the mid-1850s that the settlers set out, moving with their bullock wagons, families, oxen, sheep, cattle, and provisions, like Old Testsment tribes. They managed three miles a day with luck. They faced danger at almost every turn from the doomed aborigines, and accepted what seems to us extraordinary hardships (fisney not having sunglasses!) with a hardibood we can only marvel at. Among them was Evie Barber's greatgreat-uncle Carter, whose son Sam built Glenisla in 1873.

It is by way of being a historic house, preserved and restored by the Barbers and the National of the kind of house a grazier would build once he felt securely settled. Climate dictates the differences between a sheep station in Australia and New Zealand. With their annual 20in minfall my New Zealand friends the Symes ran 1,250 sheep on 3,000 acres. The Barbers' 12,000 had just supported their 4,000 sheep during the drought that struck Victoria last summer, though they had had to bring in fodder by truck. They had just celebrated the first rain for 11 months, a fine drenching of 2 1/2 in that had already given the earth the beginnings of fresh growth. So while the Symes' the way to breakfast. I met my fellow-guests at dinner (roast sheep, vegetables, a splendid fruit pudding) before which Eric led us in a grace. "It is the custom of the house." The girl I had heard Eric refer to as Rita turned out to be an Austrian male kitchen designer named Ritte; the others were a cavernous-voiced American investment counsellor and his wife, and a rather sad dark girl who, it was supposed, nursed an unhappy love affair. After dinner we went into the sitting room where Eric showed us a collection of clay pipes found in the bottom of an old sheepwash, and played a couple of cylinders on a 1903 Edison Bell phonograph of Harry Lauder singing "Tipperary" and "Beautiful Sunday". But this burst of inaction did not suit Eric. He took me out in-his truck and tore along the road with a powerful torch plagged into the cigarette lighter. to show me the night creatures, the kangaroos and toxes. In the morning he drove me along a forest track to the fire look-out point on Mount Bepcha, from which you can see clearly how little of the forest has been cleared compared to the expanse that remains, though the cleared paddocks, as they call fields, are the size of golf courses. Today buildozers pulling trees like teeth clear a patch in a few days. The Barbers' forebears took years, sawing each tree to stump level and lighting a fire round the The wildlife remains abundant. We put up several groups of kangaroo and emu. Eric chased them over the plain, roaring with laughter as though the sight was as fresh to him as to me. The kangaroos bounded surrealistically, like animals from a dream. The emus raced along with necks stretched and vestigial wings pressed to their sides, looking comically like old ladies running for the bus with a shopping bag under each elbow. Still on Glenisla property, we drove into a paddock at the foot of the Grampians and left the truck to walk a while. At this spot the mountain face climbed sharply in high, jagged-topped cliffs. Over them an eagle ("seven feet, I reckon, his wingspan," Barber said) circled and rose in the updraught. Under the enormous bright sky the peace was profound. Except for the clearances the scene cannot have changed in thousands of years. No wonder it is a holy region for surviving local aborigines. They sometimes make trips from their urbanized lives to camp at the foot of these cliffs, perhaps remembering in their dreams the long centuries before the Europeans came, as depicted in the wall paintings in the nearby Cave of Ghosts, the Cave of Fishes and the Cave of

The Europeans too have their ghosts. In another part of the Cobb coaches used to pound along on the journey between Melbourne and Adelaide. It was a strangely stirring sight. It needed very little conjure up the sounds of furious action, the cursing and whip-cracking, the sweating horses, the squeak and rattle of harness.

Sitting on the verandah after breakfast, enjoying the little flocks of cockatoos and crimson rosellas, the grey and pink galah parrots and such familiar birds as magnics and sparrows, I felt I wouldn't have objected to staying on for a year or so – as a guest, that is. I couldn't manage the chores, for despite the benefits that electricity pours into the countryside the life is

Although they could not be seen from Glenisla, two homesteads of equal size lay within a couple of miles, the properties ings, like segments of cake. The mam Hamilton-Horsham road runs past the front entrance, bringing certain anxiety at times, I thought. As if on cue a big, shabby Holden turned into the yard and a very dirty woman, followed by a large and grubby man, got out. Eric hurried to meet them. "I thought they'd be up," he said when he returned "Ran out of petrol. I noticed them stop last night. Slept in the car by the

"Did it occur to you that they might be Bonnie and Clyde?"
"Lord, no. Nothing like that ever happens here. Where would they get to? There are so few people round here the police would have them in the next town."

Perhaps the only snags are that one would have to eat 100 much sheep, and would inevi-tably grow hardened in one's dealings with them. Eric was clearly as good a fellow as ever walked, but it must be a long time since he had been able to consider sheep as sentinent fellow creatures. He raised his Merinos for wool and fattened the older ones for export. I wondered if it had ever bothered him that a good slice of his life was bought by these meek creatures who were shipped live to the Middle East for slaughter. It was one of those questions I wish I could have brought myself to ask.

Life on the opal trail

don't have deal with bureaucrats if you want to build a house or start a business. A place where you can try to get rich quick and defy the odds by gambling on anything from premium bonds to football pools.

At Lightning Ridge in the Australian outback both these dreams can come true. About 400 miles from Sydney, the ridge is a community of drifters and dreamers who come in search of wealth, and to discover an escape route from many of the pressures of the twentieth century.

It is by no means an idyll, resembling a sun-parched, glaring moonscape more than a Garden of Eden. But it is the only place in the world where black opals have been discovered. The stones can be as valuable as gem-quality dia-monds, but a great deal harder

The technical difficulties in finding them and getting them out of the ground have meant that big international mining interests have never become involved. The field has remained open to independent prospectors who have been tramping Australia for the last

Lightning Ridge is bad grazing land, where sheep only venture in times of extreme drought, so land owners are quite happy to encourage miners to explore beneath the earth. All they have to do is put down a SAus50 (about £30) deposit (returnable when they leave the site safe and tidy), and pay a $Aus12.50 annual registration fee for the mining rights to an area 50 metres square. Each person is allowed two claims, and most serious miners

At a spot on the seabed known as the legs and was paddling uncer-Bommie, we saw shoals of fish; coral trout, golden trevally, red emperor, graceful angel fish, hump-headed Maori wrasse, and a lugubrious greasy cod by Mr Gomersall which acts as weighing some 35lb and looking monstrous. In a crevice behind the massive heads of staghorn coral lurked a pair of moray eels known to divers who explore there regularly as Fang and Harry. It is not absolutely necessary to travel so far offshore to savour the reef. Shute Harbour has its own speciacular reef a short distance offshore, and from there it is possible to charter sailing craft to explore the Whitsunday group of islands. Sailing requires particular care with so many coral heads lying just beneath the surface, and proven experience ed to fly out to the reef with his bicycle. "What are you hoping to do?" the bewildered pilot is required before a taking a self-sail charter. Each yacht has VHF radio and charterers are required to make a daily check call and to be settled at anchor before sundown. Ronald Faux

EATING OUT

High and dry on a jumbo specialist shops in Values (overleaf) or just visiting, we investigate pub lunches in Hampstead and Highgate.

it would be stretching it to describe a journey round the pubs of Hampstead and Highgate as a "crawl" - given the picturesque quality of the neighbourhoods, it would be more of an elegant sway. Yet as far as catering is concerned, it seems that the old restaurant law applies: "The more attractive the setting, the less effort need be taken".

Certainly the pub lunches offered on my tour were largely dominated by jumbo sausages, cheese salads and, as the blackboards describe them, assorted quiches". The visitor, drawn to these areas by their history and village charm may welcome the progress of the Campaign for Real Ale, but will probably leave endorsing a Campaign for Real Food.

An honourable exception to this criticism is The King of Bohemia, a well-kept, woodpanelled house at the foot of Hampstead High Street. Cold. lunches here are augmented by a range of excellent home-made pies served with vegetables (chicken and ham £1.60, steak and kidney £1.65), with spicy rissoles or fish and chips (£1.50) as alternatives. This is also one of the few pubs to offer puddings (apple pie and ice-cream, 50p) and coffee. The house beer is Wethered's, and there is a pretty, ivy-clad patio at the rear for open-air eating.

At the top of the High Street, in Flask Walk, is one of Hampstead's most famous pubs, The Flask, Guide books suggest that it is full of bearded intellectuals and poets, but the lunchtime and any poets are probably the sort who sell their work in 10p booklets. The interior is striking - huge windows, high ceilings and painted pre-Raphaelite panels - but the food is unadventurous, transport café stuff (sausages, egg and chips 80p, cheese and onion pie 78p, ham, egg and chips £1.15), although the chips are terrific and the Rombouts coffee is a bonus. Watch out for the Pinteresque "pot-man" in BR jacket and badges. Up above Heath Street.

Hampstead is at its dinkiest, and it is no surprise to find that the tastefully preserved Holly Bush, with its sepia-toned interior of wooden banquettes and panelling, is the local hostelry. Equally predictable is the appropriately prickly service and the dullish food - ploughman/fisherman/gamckeeper's (£1.20), bland pizzas and burgers and one rapidly vanishing daily special such as chilli, con carne (£1.30) or sweet and sour chicken (£1.35). There is also the ubiquitous jumbo sausage.

Moving up over the Heath towards Highgate, it is impossible to miss Jack Straw's Castle, a sprawling modern edifice that looks more like a coastguard's base than a pub. An upstairs carvery offers fixedprice, meat-based meals, while "Toby's Pantry" (a refrigerated display) on the ground floor offers the usual range of salads and a couple of hot daily dishes. Highgate itself has at least one winning entry with its own Flask, a large but attractive "coaching inn" with a wide, table-lined forecourt and a tasteful, atmospheric maze of bars. There is also some imagination and effort in the kitchens, with samosas and home-made pizzas brightening the cold display. Hot dishes on

For those attracted by the trade is mostly office workers, my visit included a smashing braised-liver casserole with fresh vegetables (£2.50) and a strapping chunk of shepherd's pie (£1.75). The friendly and efficient staff even helped a tourist with his map-reading.

Not so impressive is The Prince of Wales, where a pleasant aspect on to Pond Square is let down by lunches limited to not roast beef sandwiches (£1.50), ploughman's (£1) and instant pizzas (90p) and burgers (80p). The Guinness, though, is immaculate, and there is an appealing strand of eccentricity among the clientèle, testified to by the occasional classical pianist or ball-room dancing couple.

The adjacent Ye Olde Gate House has no such aberrations Homely, neatly furnished and clean, it offers simple grills (mixed £2.75, lamb cutlet £1.75) and quick-fried snacks (scampi and chips £2,25) with a touch of the neo-European (lasagne 90p, moussaka £1.50) all unobjectionable but feature-

Of course our ridiculous licensing laws do not encourage the progress of catering in pubs, but one would have thought that the residents of Hampstead and Highgate, who always seem to be pretending that they live in France, would bring more pressure on their locals to enhance the notion.

School fees

Save the agony by saving with a flexible scheme

With only days left before the start of a new term, the annual agonizing over school fees and how to pay them begins.

A lot of mystery surrounds

school-fees schemes but anyone seeking advice should remember that they all basically utilize existing insurance plans, the proceeds of which can be used for a number of purposes - not just the provision of school fees.

The parents' objective should be to build up a fund which can be used for several purposes. You may find that you change your mind about independent education, so it is important to make sure that any scheme has sufficient flexibility. The priority should be the maximum capital appreciation of savings. One scheme not generally used by school-fees planners is the tax-exempt Friendly Society policy, where your savings accumulate in a totally tax-free sketches, created for the closeup cosiness of the small screen, become lost in a huge audi-torium in front of thousands of spectators. The unease is compounded when, as on this tape, the live audience consists of sycophantic yet often uncomprehending Californians. The occasional Americanization of Pythonesque references draws boots of approval, but only debases the comic impact. Python team members perform awkwardly, and they are reduced to using filmed sketches, shown on a large screen, when

If the summer holidays are proving a drag video could come to the rescue. There is certainly no shortage of tapes for children and the quality is often surprisingly high. What follows is merely a small selection of the more recent

As with videos generally, these children's programmes will mostly be rented, rather than bought, but some of them are priced keenly enough to tempt purchase. After all, children, unlike adults, are quite happy to see the same things over and over again; and a video show can be a popular party item.

For a start, I can recommend a series put out by VCL under the title "Cartoon Caronsel". They are animated versions, each lasting around 45 minutes, such classic stories as Robinson Crusoe, Treasure Island and Journey to the Centre of the Earth. Tastefully and entertainingly done, they retail at around £25.

have pioneered children's video in Britain. Peter No-Tail is a Disney-ish fantasy about a kitten born without a tail and was made by the Swedish Film Institute. It runs 81 minutes and costs around £37. The label's other offerings include something called The Incredible, Indelible, Magical, Physical Mystery Trip, an American tape (it was nomi-nated for an Emmy award) which tries to be both entertainment and education with warnings about looking after teeth and the dangers of smoking (47 minutes, £30). There is also the strictly nondidactic comedy Western, West and Soda (90 minutes, £37).

One of the longest video programmes yet produced for children is volume two of the Bumper Fun Video Annual from Kidivid, Volume one was released last December for Christmas and this one is threed for the summer holidays, but the material is not specially seasonal. Aimed at eight to tenyear-olds, the tape runs for three hours and follows the format of the printed children's comic with such heroes as Popeye, Bugs Bunny, Super-man, Flash Gordon and Laurel and Hardy. And all for around £45.

Peter Waymark

There is news this month of a video company formed for the admirable purpose of releasing those specialist "art" films that win the critical plaudits and play for a couple of weeks but hardly surface again.

The only drawback to Capstan Video's plans may be finding enough dealers willing to stock the tapes, particularly outside London; but the enterprise is to be applauded. Its first two titles are Pontecorvo's Battle of Algiers, from 1965, and Karoly Mark's study of a lesbian relationship Another Way, which had its cinema release in Britain this year. If Capstan is dedicated to providing the pick of cinema, another new company, Golden Turkey Video, is hoping to make its mark by putting out films whose very badness is the reason for seeing them. It has acquired the British video rights to 42 titles, claimed to be among the world's worst.

Sounds like Professor 'iggins sorting our 'ackney from "Or guessing that Alfred Doolittle, like your husband, had Welsh ancestry. In many places, local traditions were so strong that it is possible to attribute a piece of furniture to a specific area. On the other hand, they persisted for so long that they make it much more difficult to date certain things with accuracy.

"I'm not sure that folk culture is really my sort of thing. But do go on."

Welsh dressers demonstrate the principle rather well. Those from south Wales, made from abut the middle of the eighteenth century for a hundred years or so, are usually rather like yours in hasic construction - open bases with pot-boards below. In north Wales, the bases were usually enclosed with cupboards and drawers occupying all the space. In west Wales, from the early nineteenth century, there was an open space at the centre, known as a "dog kennel". Ilanked by a pair of cupboards. But that's only the start of it. An expert can pick out a detail that was peculair to a particular

"My husband's grandmother was pretty peculiar herself. But are dressers peculiar to Wales? People always talk about Welsh dressers' Weren't they made anywhere else?"

Oh yes. Almost every part of Europe and North America made them in one form or another. But the Welsh seem to have been particularly devoted to them, and went on making them as parlour pieces and preserving them as status symhols long after they had been relegated to the kitchens in more sophisticated circles."

"I don't think I like being called a sophisticated circle and accused of relegating the poor thing, it makes it sound like one of those nathetic little football teams. Do you think it ought to be promoted?" "Well, it is an exceptionally good example of the tate-eight-century south Wales type, with nearly all the features

"I don't imagine there'll be considered most desirable. That Glenda Jackson can usually be people who said they did not much to concern you in the doesn't mean that a dresser has relied upon to associate herself understand the play, and there kitchen", said the owner. "It's a to boast all of them to be either with something unexpected, be has been a good deal of work on envine or worthwhile, but ea adds guite a bit to its value.

"You mean it's worth real money. My feeling for folk minute. Please explain. "To begin with, it's mainly oak, not pine - although the drawer-linings and the shelves are pine - and it's a good rich, dark colour. The rack of shelves has shaped ends, tapering towards the base into 'shoes', or supports, with a nice bold curve to them. And the rack is the original one - not, as is so often the case, a made-up replace-ment. At the boxtom of it. between the shoes, is a row of little spice-drawers.

"The Welsh must have been awfully keen on spices to have a whole row of drawers to accommodate them.

"In practice, I think they used to contain bits of string and unpaid bills. Now we come to the base. One as good as this, these days, is highly prized as a serving table, even if the rack has gone missing.

"A double bank of drawers, resting on well-turned legs that come down to a particularly good pot-board, constructed with three raised panels. And below that, feet with an unusual detail - an ogee curve to their fronts".

Sounds very sexy when you put it like that. But I must say I find that fussy bit of fretwork under the drawers a bit of a curse. Gathers dust. Pure hell to keep clean." That happens to be the most Returning this week to the West End stage, where she was last seen playing Hitler's mistress, Eva Braun, in Robert David Macdonald's Summit Conference, she appears to have made one of her more eccentric choices.

The play in question is Great and Small, by Botho Strauss, one of Germany's leading playrights. The English production, directed by Keith Hack, has already been on tour, to Leeds, Manchester, Bath and Richmond, and has been re-ceived with suspicion and, in some cases, a lack of under-standing which has provoked cries of "Rubbish" and the pitter-patter of feet leaving the thearre

It is an episodic play about a roman's search for her own identity in the midst of an alien ament. The woman, Lotte, played by Glenda Jackson, struggles against a world lacking in morality and human spittens values until she finds her own identity.

Great and Small was first produced at the Berliner Schabbuhne in 1978, ran fer a year in Paris in 1982, has been performed in many European countries, and was staged in New York in 1979. Hack and his cast were Glenda Jackson is looking forward to its West End opening. "I think it is a very good play. Its themes are interesting and relevant, and the author's way of presenting them fascinating. He paints on a very large canvas and takes huge risks theatrically.

She believes that if the play had been done in its more natural home - the National or the RSC - the reaction would act have been so marked. "We are getting more and more of the play as we go on. We probably will not get it all to our satisfaction, but it is a play which is worth all the effort."

"And how", somebody once asked W. C. Fields, "do you like children?" "Boiled", came the nasal drawi from beneath the strawberry nose. It is not important whether the quizzing took place on screen or off. With Fields, the dividing line between the two worlds was blurred. Before the camera, he was the bibulous child-detester and the American Falstaff at war with the twentieth century.

Behind the camera, he was no less impossible. "All the men in my family were bearded", he was to say in a rare burst of public misogamy. "So were most of the women."

This strange and brilliant funny-man, former juggler and pantomimist, is the alpha and omega of The Vintage W. C. Fields, a compilation of clips from many of his early films, to be screened on Channel 4 today (2.45-4.25pm). Some of the cenes are classics of their kind, The Dentist, for example, which shows the sadistic streak in Fields at its best (or, depending on your point of view, its worst). Film historian Raymond Rohauer, producer of The Vintage W. C. Fields, has also managed to unearth an unpolished gem of great interest to fans who "collect" Fields movies in the way others track down rare stamps. It will be the first unveiling on British tele-vision of the deleted Fields sequence from the 1942 omni-bus film Tales of Manhattan, a film best remembered, perhaps, for the splitting of Charles ducts a symphony orchestra. Fields launched himself on his screen career in 1915 - in a film called Pool Sharks, featured in today's film - by proclaiming, with all the assur-ance of a veteran, that his ambition was to bring back the old burlesque. "The danger of the screen right now", he said, "is that it will get too nice, too refined." Until the day he died, 31 years later, niceness and refinement were two qualities conspicuously absent from his nose for comedy. The more he drank, the more bulbous it became. The Vintage W. C. Fields does not, however, show it in full bloom. These were early, pre-dissipation days.

FIDE statutes forbid in the strongest terms any indulging in racial national or political prejudices and it is obvious that the statutes must be obeyed and their provisions honoured. Yet it has to be admitted that, on this occasion Florencio Campomanes, the president of the World Chess Federation, and the most powerful federation within it, the Soviet Chess Federation, have between them made a complete mess of the vhole affair. In the past, I have been involved in Candidates matches, either as one of the organizers or as one of the judges, and I despair at the utter failure in the present imbroglio of any understanding on the part of the opposing factions of the point of view of the players, and of the whole of the chess world who are so anxious to see hese matches played.

One has to differentiate between the two matches. It is clear that neither Korchnoi nor Kasparov wanted to play their match in Pasadena. Both would have been quite happy to play Rotterdam and therefore Mr Campomanes was wrong in llowing the feeble monetary consideration of 40,000 Swiss francs (about £12,000) to carry such weight. This was the dditional amount that the United States Chess Federation vas prepared to pay FIDE to host the match.

It is true that the money was to have gone to a good cause, namely a fund for developing nations. It is true also that nothing in the regulations states that the president must give the authority, but this has been true practice, as is only right and for a good cause does not really have much bearing on this undoubtedly been played in

What is clear is that the chess world has been deprived of a fascinating match, that between Kasparov and Korchnoi, and possibly of a still more fascinating encounter between Kasparov and Karpov. To restore some sanity to the chess world. is the duty of some federation to propose at the next meeting of the FIDE congress in October that the president acted wrongly in defaulting the players.

As a sample of what we may be missing I give a game that Kasparov played in the last round of the forty-ninth Soviet Championship tournament at Frunze in 1981 when he was 18

The Festival's Vienna 1900 theme seems much more fruitful on the visual arts and music sides than in theatre, but in fact it has induced major itself, straddling the Fringe/Fest factory that promises free theatre companies to come up, tival boundary with Festival samples to five-year-olds of all events such as 7:84's production with interesting rarities that promise ideal festival fare. Glasgow Citizens, in the severe Victorian open spaces of the Assembly Hall, open tomorrow Karl Kraus's vast epic The Last Days of Mankind, Essayist, journalist and aphorist - "Truth is a clumsy scullery maid who breaks the dishes as she washes them up" - Kraus the Grouse himself is played by director Giles Havergal, while Robert David MacDonald translates and produces. The following week, MacDonald plays Baron Ochs in Philip Prouse's production of von Hofmannsthal's prose-comedy version of Rosen-

Meanwhile, in the Assembly Rooms during the first week, Haifa Municipal Theatre stages The Soul of a Jew, a controversial new Israeli play about the violently anti-Semitic writer Otto Weininger who committed suicide in 1903 and posthumously aroused Hitler's admiration. Martin Esslin will lecture on Viennese theatre and literature of the period on Thursday.

Women in Power, John McGrath's "decent adaptation" of Aristophanes's two "rude The Assembly Women and The Knights for the 7:84 Company, opens at the Assembly Rooms on Aug 29. The next evening, Nuria Espert's company from Spain move into the Lyceum with one week brings to the Lyceum Lindsay Anderson's Cherry Frank Finlay, Leslie Phillips and Bernard Miles.

Also in the last week, in another hall in the Assembly Rooms, the South African Poppie Nonenga Company present their musical play of the same name. Solo or near-solo shows include Claire Bloom as Shakespeare beroines, Nigel Stock as Dr Watson and Alistair Cooke as himself.

FRINGE THEATRE

Almost 500 groups on this year's Fringe will, as usual, be at it at all hours of the day. The 12-page quarto Fringe programme is much too big to carry in anything but a knap-sack. London theatregoers, flipping through its pages, will recognize fringe shows they have enjoyed plus a good sprinkling of miserable efforts that one hoped had been buried for good. There will be a great for good. Thus the thirty-seventh edition of the Edinburgh International Film Festival (todayuntil Sept 4) presents a large clutch of titles shortly due for commercial release. There is Zeffirelli's exhilarating film of La Traviata (Aug 28); Alan Rudolph's modestly rewarding Return Engagement (Aug 27). Dostoyevsky's The Idiot nightly for the next two weeks. London on Thurs (see page 7).

But small festivals can succeed by pouncing on off-beat titles and mounting retrospectives of neglected, unknown or outrageous talents. Edinburgh's director Jim Hickey has assiduretrospective of contemporary seem a recipe for empty houses, but the Oshima retrospective, which starts tomorrow, is an excellent idea.

If, for all their mysterious beauties, Oshima's films lack the esoteric appeal of the ideal festival retrospective, dedicated film buffs need not despair: who could be more arcane than Gianni Amelio, a young Italian director of television documentaries and features, or Ladislaw Starewicz, a Russian-born pioncer of puppet animation? Fortunately, both offer more than novelty. Amelio's Blow to the Heart (Wed) reveals a distinctive talent, capable of handling a combustible subject - terrorism - with rigid restraint and emotional penetration. Other films on display include studies of Bertolucci (Bertolucci According to the Cinema, Mon) and the philosopher Campa-nella (City in the Sun, Tues). Starewicz, by contrast, leads the viewer into a world free from restraint and philosophy, where the varied impulses of a puppet animator, entymologist and phantasmagorical story-teller roam at will. Insects canoodie, rats wear brassières about on legs, monkeys' tails

GALLERIES For once, the visual arts are right at the centre of the festival this year: the Vienna 1900 show in the new galleries at the National Museum of Antiquities of Scotland is, in effect, the theme show of the whole festival, binding together a number of musical and dramatic events into a general homage to Vienna in its Art Nouveau heyday. The exhibition itself, which runs until Sept 25, gathers paintings and decorative arts by Vienna at the turn of the century, including Schiele, Kokoschka, Josef Hoffmann, Otto Wagner and Adolf Loos, as well as featuring a group of paintings by Schoen-berg never before seen in this country. There is also a Scottish connexion, since it was at the eighth Vienna Secession exhibition in 1900 that Charles Rennie Mackintosh and his associates made an overwhelming impression on European taste with their Scottish Room, which has been reconstructed for the occasion by the Fine Art Society at their gallery, 12 Great King Street.

The theme is taken further by the Mercury Gallery, 2-3 North Bank Street, The Mound, with a show of the applied arts of the Wiener Werkstätte 1903-1932, which is coupled with a show of recent work by the latterday Scottish colourist John Houston

(both until Sept 17). The Scottish Gallery, 94 George Street, has an extensive show of recent work by Sir

National Gallery continues throughout the festival to celebrate an earlier generation of Scottish artists, that of Sir William Quiller Orchandson, William MacTaggart and John Pettie, who were all part of Robert Scott Lauder's Masterclass (until Oct 2).

The 369 Gallery in the High Street brings it all together with Scottish Expressionism (until Sept 10), tracing this strain in Scottish art from MacTaggart to Philipson and beyond, while the City Art Centre weighs in with a show of Scottish Crafts Now.

CONCERTS

What with the Vienna 1900 exhibition, a ballet version of Cokoscolos with music by Schoenberg, and Zemlinsky operas, there is a strong Anstrian presence at this year's festival A number of Zemlinsky's rarely heard instrumental works will also be played, including his Piano Trio, Quartet No 3 and Sinfonietta.

The opening concert begins with Berg's post-Mahlerian Orchestral Pieces Op 6, then Shura Cherkassky, making his first Edinburgh Festival appearance for many years, offers a recital that ranges from Berg (Sonata Op 1) to Bach-Busoni. in another programme, Cherkassky follows Saint-Saens's Concerto No 2 with Liszt's astonishing solo piano tran-scription of Wagner's Tannhauser Overture. There is naturally plenty of Webern in his centenary year, including the Passacaglia Op 1, Orchestral Pieces Op 6 and 10, and Bagatelles Op 9. Weber also gets in, with his Konzertstück. with Richard Strauss's Burlesque. Still on the subject of piano recitals Cécile Ousset is, of course, present, and the Labèque Sisters will be playing Dussek's Concerto for Two Pianos with the Czech Philharmonic, who later perform all six symphonic poems in Smetana's Ma Vlast cycle.

Schoenberg is even better represented than his pupils, by works ranging from the gigantic and very beautiful Gurrelieder to some Berlin cabaret songs. These can be heard late at night, from Reinbert de Leeuw's Schoenberg Ensemble of the Netherlands, with Pierrot Lunaire and the master's arrangement of Johann Strauss's Roses from the South. Another Schoenberg Ensemble programme includes Zemlinsky's Maeterlinck Songs, Busoni's Berceuse Elégiaque.
Reger's Romantic Saite and Debussy's L'Après-midi d'un Faune, all reduced for chamber orchestra by Schoenberg. And there are lectures on "Schoen-berg the Painter" and Schoenberg the Musician", while the Songmakers' Almanac have a programme called "Alma Mahl-: Louis is the first American er and Her World". Mahler himself is present, or course, with his Symphonies new American work and one in Nos 4 and 10, the latter homage to Delius both of which completed for him by Deryck were admired by John Higgins, who saw them on home

Robin Philipson, President of clude Nielsen's "Inextinguish-the Royal Scottish Academy able", Beethoven's "Eroica" (until Sept 14). The Scottish and Haydn's "La Passione". The Hamburg State Opera presents on Monday and Wednesday A Florentine Tragedy and The Birthday of the Infanta, both based on Oscar Wilde stories and both highly individusi pieces behind the echoes of Strauss, Mahler and Schoenberg himself. Productions are by Adolf Dresen with Gerd Albrecht conducting.

Flanking the Zemlinsky are three performances in German of Die Zauberslote on Tres, Thurs and Aug 27 in a fresh, pentomimic production by Achim Freyer, conducted by Christoph Von Dohananyi, with a cast including Helen Donath, Carls del Re and Kurr Moll. City Editor's Comment

Figuring out the numbers puzzle

omic figures is distinctly puzzling. If the mood in industry and in the country was different, they might indeed breed gloom and talk of the recovery petering out.

The most noticable item was the cut in industrial production in June. This was not at all what was expected and has led to a number of explanations about changing seasonal patterns and, inevitably, if early, the weather.

However, figures for output in the second quarter confirmed the impressions. They showed gross domestic product on the output measure perversely stag-

But how reliable are these figures? Some city analysts, such as Mr Gavyn Davies of Simon & Coates and Mr Tim O'Dell of Philips & Drew take them seriously enough to take a second look at growth forecasts for the year, officially increased from 2 per cent around 2.5 per cent by the new Chancellor.

Others are more sanguine. Mr Mike Osborne of cent advance in the third Grieveson, Grant for instance, argues that the alternative expenditure measure of output has proved more accurate in the Although this is based on tax returns and takes longer to work out, the spring retail sales boom suggests the recovery is still on course, however paltry it may seem in comparison with what is going on across the Atlantic. Statistics, breed some doubt over what is happening in the shops. Retailers have been cutting their stocks, presumably because they were tardy to order more as the retail boom gathered strength. Yet retail sales fell back slightly in July, suggesting that Britain's shopkeepers might have been more canny than its economic forecasters. There may have been some slackening of confidence, probably brought on

British and American money growth and the consequent threat of higher interest rates. But this should be a cause for solace rather than worry today.

We have so often be faced in recent years with Murphy's law in economics, that many are locked in the mentality that if one thing goes right, something else is bound to go wrong to spoil it.

For once, this position may be reversed. If output growth goes wrong, the threat of higher interest rates, should recede. The main reason why many economic forecasters have turned pessimistic about the recovery lasting into next year is that they expect interest rates to jump in the autumn. Messrs James Capel fear 12 per cent base rates.

These fears stem first from the above target growth of British money supply, second from the rapid growth of money and the economy in the United States (with higher interest rates there being transmitted through the exchange rate) and thirdly from competition, most obviously between banks and building societies. for the depressed savings of Britain's high-spending consumer.

Once the Chancellor insisted he would curb the public sector's contribution to money growth by fair means or foul, the emphasis switched to fast-rising bank lending in June, which did not persist on in July.

The upward pressure on American interest rates and the dollar has abated, at least for the moment. And if British consumers stop spending quite so much, they may ease competition for savings. Mr Osborn, for one, now thinks there will be more pressure for a cut in bank interest rates in the autumn rather than a rise. A confusing picture, but not necessarily a depressing

Pensions boost for business expansion

The Government's new but ness expansion scheme has given an interesting stimulus to company directors and the self-employed who run their own self-administered

Messrs John Bevan and Mike Reynolds of James Hay Pension Trustees formed the idea of channelling funds raised by companies from the business expansion scheme, through higher salaries from the directors into the self-administered pension fund. The fund can then invest in the company. or in other small businesses. Any profits made in the pension fund accrue free of tax and are directly attributable to the directors in the form of enhanced pension benefits.

They found themselves acting as brokers between their clients who were seeking funds under the business expansion scheme and others who were looking to invest.

Generally, they advise clients to increase their salary and invest 50 per cent of the increase in the pension scheme (which can then reinvest either in their own company or in other companies) and 50 per cent direct into other companies. Both types of investment attract tax relief at the investor's top rate.

The result has been a large number of enquiries from 'interestingly, w that because our clients are selfmade men they are prepared to accept far greater risks than established institutions" says Mr John Bevan.

With only days left before the start of a new term, the annual agonizing over school fees and how to pay them begins.

A lot of mystery surrounds

school-fees schemes but anyone seeking advice should remember that they all basically utilize existing insurance plans, the proceeds of which can be used for a number of purposes - not just the provision of school fees.

The parents' objective should be to build up a fund which can be used for several purposes. You may find that you change your mind about independent education, so it is important to make sure that any scheme has sufficient flexibility. The priority should be the maximum capital appreciation of savings. One scheme not generally used by school-fees planners is the tax-exempt Friendly Society policy, where your savings accumulate in a totally tax-free

been somewhat eclipsed by the prospect of a further tranche of state-owner shares in HP coming on the market.

Sales of BP shares are an easy way for the Government to finance its spending pro-gramme or arguably a sensible extension of its privatization policy. The sale of Britoil shares would be less easy.

The Government will have to convince the investor that the present price of about 250p is likely to commune its slow climb from the placing of 215p. The Government will also have to drop the idea of floating off a new company comprising the North Sea assets of British Gas if British shares are ever to have a chance in the market.

Britoil will publish its interim figures in the coming week and t is likely that the dividend will be in line with brokers' forecasts at 4p. The company's forecast of a 9.9p net dividend for 1983 should also be met. (Britoil follows Shell in providing for a ful tax charge in its accounts while the other companies provide for corporation tax only when it is foreseeable, which at present means not all.

BP will produce interim figures on September 1. The profits should point to a fullyear result ahead of the £700m carned in 1983. After the Shell results it is likely that this forecast may well be low, and although an interim dividend of 6.25p may be paid as forecast, the final dividend could be much higher. For that reason alone BP may have an edge over Britoil

Another factor is the different nature of Britoil's assets. Allowing for development already taking place in the North Sea, Britoil's resources in that area will begin to decline in 1985. But they will be offset by increased gas production and by the prospect of condensate fields in Dubai making considerable contributions to profits towards the end of the

In addition, substantial investments by Britoil have been made in Ireland, Indonesia, France and in onshore production facilities and in potential oil-bearing exploration.

The capital investment involved in these new areas will affect future dividends paid by Britoil, although changes in North Sea taxation could counteract this. The prospects for longer term growth are real, if not speciacular.

Having arrived at this pos-ition, Britoil could therefore be justified in feeling aggreeved for up to one quarter of the

There was champagne all round at Rockware Group yesterday: the outgoing char-man and chief executive, Mr Jim Craigie, was celebrating his birthday and Rockware had just raised £9.6m to case precarlous financial position. Rockware says its banks were nowhere near pulling the plug and had put up £5m of what it calls "pre-financing". Repayment of this loan will eat up half the cash raised. Half-year figures, also published yester-day, show a loss of £8.5m but Rockware is adamant that it will be asking for no more money from its shareholders and the balance of £4.6m will be enough to see it through.

It has raised the £9.6m through an issue of 16-million 7.7 per cent convertible preference shares among 16 big shareholders, including Pilkington Brothers, which has a 19.5 per cent stake. Other share-holders will be able to subscribe £715,000 last time, on a turnover down slightly at £63.8m. Interest charges, were up from £1.74m to £2m. A transfer from capital reserves of £1.56m produced trading profit of £236,000 against £1.02m, and a loss per share of 6.8p. The implication is that borrowings must have risen since interest rates have fallen.

The dividend was held at a nominal 0.1p, and shareholders should not be optimistic about what this year has in store.

It has been an unhappy year for the company, although the precise reasons are obscure because Mining Supplies demonstrates a reluctance, sur-prising in a publicity-quoted company, to divulge details.

The mining supplies division had been said, at the half-way stage, to have been in profit, but the Laurence Scott electric motors producer had pulled the group into loss after several years of strong growht, thereby proving that diversification is not always for the good. But that situation seems to have been turned upside down by the

Both division s have laid off workers, the Laurence Scott division produced a trading profit after the first-half losses. The improvement is said to be continuing in the first quarter of the current year, and should be maintained

The uppurn stems from manufacturing efficiency, partly the result of redundancies, and an orderbook fattened by stronger demand for high quality specialist rotating machines and defence equip-

To be fair, a good part of Laurence Scott's problems was the £1m tradin loss caused by a 'dramatic" fall-off in demand in low tension control gear.

But the mining supplies division results, were depressed by the recession in coal-mining. On present showing, however the mining supplies division holds the key to recovery.

There is a chance that gold mines will come back into favour. A stagnant gold price and the feeling that the shortage of scrip in South Africa had quality issues up to rather pricy levels are giving way to the possibility that bullion will gain in the last quarter of the year, and that a medium-Mining Supplies, the dark-horse of a sector that has term re-rating of the mines could be appropriate. Waites leans heavily on a club lent by a club member Brian Waltes has spent so much time on the circuit this season that the standing joke at Hollinwell, where he is the club professional, is to tell him that caddies are not allowed in the clubhouse. Not that there is any animosity towards him. Waites has been engaged in a long battle to earn a place in the European Ryder Cup team to meet the United States in October. With £34,725 already in the kitty, Waites, to all intents and purposes, is home and dry. The irony is that if he requires a final shove in the right direction it might come about because he decided last week to miss only his second tournament in 18 weeks and renew acquaintances hamshire club.

One of those memors watch into his shop brandishing a puter identical to the one that he had had stolen during the German Open last month and Waites employed it to put together a 65 in the second round of the £110,000 Benson and Parling Universitional at Euland. Parkin mutes youth's anguish

By John Hennessy, Golf Corres

If first reactions are to be trusted, the ranks of young golfers in this country may soon be severely depleted. Certainly, there were a number who emerged from the recorder's at the British youths' championship at Summingdale yesterday with an anguished declaration that they would never play the game; again after 18 harrowing holes of the new course in harrowing holes of the new course in a stiffening wind.

Philip Parkin, the amateur champion, is not among the would-be defectors, not after a second round of 66, three under par. This gave him a two-round total of 142 and a lead of two shots over Colin Montgomerie, who this time went six strokes over his first round 69 and Paul Maye, a fellow Welshman, who had a 73 yesterday. Two more rounds are to be played today.

The extraordinary thing is that

The extraordinary thing is that Parkin, for all his six-stroke superiority over any other player on the second day, did not play well, according to his own admission. Harwood should Defecting mount Sandown Dancer show of strength

Just how big a threat that will be should become much more apparant after Lear Fan, Falstaff, Quick Work and El Capistrano have done battle in the feature race at Sandown today. Lear Fan from Guy Harwood's stable is the one that excites me the most and he is my selection. By all accounts there was something magical about the way that he won his first and only race so far at Newmarket earlier this month.

Lear Fan, who started favourite that day, quickened the second that Greville Starkey asked him to go and win his race and stormed away from his rivals in the last furlong to pass the post eight lengths to the good. This was a performance which hinted in the broadest possible terms that Lear Fan is destined to erms that Lear Fan is des take high rank among the season's best and now I am looking to him to provide still more evidence by hearing this small but select field. Abounding signs of 'kids with class'

Jason Ciunie.

A week ago, Miss Mair and Whichello became British grass court champions in the the 16-and-under age group. In two weeks Miss Mair has played 20 sets and won the lot and Whichello has won 20 sets and lost two, both this week. Should they win today's finala, it may be noted that the only palyers to achieve companable doubles in these two age grops in recent years have been Susan Barker, Katrina Brasher, and Christoper Mottram.
Five of the leading girls in the 18-and-under category are missig id-under category are missig cause they are already competing on the fringe of the international circuit. But Susan Mappin, the women's national team manager, referred to both Miss Mair and Whichello when she said vesterday: in a pressure situation. That is a good sign for the future. As far as yesterday's match was concerned, England were rewarded for hard labour and that is the best way in which this match can be described.

England where to the best way in which this match can be described.

England have no match today but they will have to put everything into tomorrow's game against West Germany if they are to make an impact. Their next two matches are impact. Their next two matches are England's lead was increased by Review from a thoriconters in the England's lead was increased by Review from a thoriconters in the country of against Austria and France and they should win both.

10-0 by Spain, nine of their goals having been scored by Mariano Bordas, six from short corners. In two matches he has scored 10 goals from 14 short corner attempts. Bordas thus set up a world record, beating the previous best of eight goals scored by Paul Litjens of the Netherlands against the United States in 1977 and Juan Amat against Cube. The first 25 minutes belonged to England who forced five short corners, the first of which led to a penalty stroke from which they scored in the twelth minute. England's ascendancy began with a run down the left by Sherwani who was obstructed inside the circle. Barber's shot from the short corner

England's lead was increased by Barber from a short corner in the ninth minute of the second half after a perfect stop by Leman. Wales then, took off Nazir Mohamed and brought Cowx into action. But the change made little difference.

England forced another short corner and this time Barber's shot missed the mark. Sherwani was in a missed the mark. Sherwani was in a scoring position soon after but with the goalkeeper out of position, Williams cleared from near the line. Late in the game Wales made another substitution with Gowman replacing Western. But the best Wales did in the closing minutes:

Psychological advantage lies with United

The Seventy-fifth Charity-Shield striking partnership with Rush the that opens the football season at League's leading goalscorer last Wembley today will be appropriately an exhibition of the ancient and the modern. Manchester Robinson, bought from Brighton ately an exhibition of the ancient and the modern. Manchester United, the winners of the inaugural for £200,000, has the unlikely match against Queens Park Rangers in 1908 but who have not won the unophy outright for a quarter of a sentury, meet Liverpool the holders and undefeated during their sixth visit over the last nine years.

Cowans setback for Villa

Aston Villa's plans for the new season have been dealt a severe blow, following the serious injury sustained by Gordon Cowans in a friendly tournament in Spain. The England midfield player broke a leg on Thursday night, and early reports suggest that he will be out for at least three mounts.

This could signal a halt to the proposed transfer of Dennis Mortimer has had talks with proposed transfer of Dennis Mor-timer. Mortimer has had talks with Chelsea and West Bromwich, but now Villa may need him to replace Cowans in midfield alongside the new signings, Steve McNahon from Everton and Alan Curbishley from Birmingham.

Villa drew 2-2 with the Mexican side, America, and lost 4-3 on penalties, allowing America to progress to the final against Real peak, should be more powerful, the sparkle of the trophies they won last season dazzling the eyes of Celtic, who hold only the League Cup.

Abordeen are favourites to take the title — not to mention the Scottish Cup and League Cup. Alex Ferguson, their manager, who led them to European Cup Winners' Sup success, has formed a squad who are the envy of every club in the land. They have to over come only those lapses of concentration which prevented them adding the league title to their two cup successes to make them invincible.

Although Dundee United are, in the opinnon of the bookmakers, outsiders at 9-2, they should be still a more formudable team, now beautifully blended and at last, thanks to their title success, filled with self-belief.

With their restricted pool.

Hopes are high in Scotland that the quality of football in the premier division which kicks off today will be even better than it was last year, which was the most engrossing since the division was formed in 1975. Competition, even if it is mainly centred on the rivalry of the four leading clubs, Dundee United, Celtue, Aberdeen and Rangers, will be keener than ever.

For once it is in the east that supporters are most enthusiastically rubbing their hands in anticipation of the new campaign while in the west, the impregnable bastion of the same for nearly a century, there is more than a flicker of apprehension in the hearts of the legions who follow Celtic and Rangers.

The Old Firm fortress crumbled list season, and the well equipped New Firm of Aberdeen and Dundee United, with their confidence at a peak, should be more powerful, the eyes of the bookmakers; but they may have an uneasy start; and it is imperative for them to open with a peak, should be more powerful, the exercised David Hay as manager, are still the leaders in the eyes of the bookmakers; but they may have an uneasy start; and it is imperative for them to open with a peak, should be more powerful, the exercised in training.

Canada's heritage alive and well and living in Woolwich

A vital part of Canada's beritage, including photographs, maps, music and books missing for many years, has been found in the recesses of the Woolwich Arsenal depository of the British Library (Christopher Warman writes). The find, unveiled yesterday, has excited scholars of Canadian history because the collection of about 40,000 items covers the period 1895 to 1924. It is virtually a complete record of material published in Canada during the period. No comparable collection exists in Canada.

are the 5,000 photographs, from portraits of famous Canadians, including Mary Pickford (right), to scenes of ordinary people at work and play and studies of ethnic groups. A 1919 photograph by Howard Henry Allen (centre) shows the composer Sousa posing as stern-faced as the Indians around him. Chief Duckhunter (left), a Canadian Indian from Victoria, British Columbia, looks to have a model for the punk hair fashion of today in A. W. Gelston's picture of 1913.

including 1,400 insurance plans made by a Canadian called Goad, which provide a record hitherto incomplete because the public archives of Canada holds fewer than 500 of them. There are 15,000 pieces of sheet music, about half of which is unknown in Canada today, 10,000 books and additional collections of directories, newspapers and commercial trade catalogues.

The material was originally acquired by the British Museum (now the British Library) under the copyright deposit system operating between 1895 and 1924, when two copies were deposited in libraries in Canada and a third in the British Museum library. The Canadian copies were lost in a series of

Because the former British Museum catalogue did not list all acquisitions, a lot of the Canadian material remained uncatalogued and was stored at Woolwich. It has now been found by Dr Patrick O'Neill of Mount St Vincent University, Halifax, Nova Scotia, and Professor John R T Ettlinger of Dalhousie University, Halifax.

Letter from Costa Rica

Commander Zero's border war of fear

One morning recently Señor Franklin Valeria Zuñiga rose early to walk the 10 miles on the dirt road from his small farm near the Nicaraguan border with Costa Rica to the colegio de Upala, the local secondary school. There he told Señor, Efi Carranza Chávez, the headmaster, that he had decided to withdraw his three children from school.

The headmaster listened sympathetically, answered that he regretted seeing the three children – all good students – leave, but added that he understood the reasons. He had heard them from many other parents.

About half the school's pupils have been withdrawn, and schools in four hamlets closer to the border are closed conser to the border are closed completely. "We are afraid to send our children" Señor Valeria said.

He recited the growing list of "mysterious incidents" which plague this isolated border area. These include the hearing of a rejuste a increase. burning of a private aircraft, the murder of about a dozen people, the destruction by arsonists of 11 businesses and homes in the town centre, tales of a hit list and bomb threats against the town's only bridge, the electricity com-pany, social security office and, most recently, the secondary school.

They can do what they want to the school building but not to our children"

Sedor Valeria said.

Just who "they" are remains largely unanswered, but what is clear is that this backwater is suffering serious repercussions from the Anti-Sandinista guerrilla activities of Señor Eden Pastora being mounted clandestinely against Nicaragua's left-wing Govern-ment from purportedly neu-tral Costa Rica.

Upala teachers have been among the most outspoken critics of Senor Pastora's operation. One headmaster, Señor Tito José somarriba, told government investigators counter-revolutionary camps existed and that the Government must get rid of

He added, "I know that I am writing my death sentence, and that from this moment they will be looking for me to assassinate me as they have done with other people." Senor Pastora is well-known to Upala residents, most of whom are Nicaraguans who sought safety over the border during the Somoza dictatorship. The bearded, charismatic leader known as Commander Zero, broke with the Sandinistas in 1982 and in May this year guerrillas from his Revol-utionary Democratic Alliance (ARDE) began to attack Sandinista outposts near the border. Many Upala area residents backed him.

But now relations have soured. Some Costa Rican volunteers have been killed and many more have descried bringing back tales of shortages, poor training and disorganization among the guerrillas ranks.

Most residents now want peace, and want Senor Pastora to leave. But some police officials, large farmers and businessmen are secretly aid-ing him and others, including members of Costa Rica's legally recognized Communist Party, supply information about his activities to the Sandinistas just over the border. Both these groups have, apparently been the object of the recent spate of crimes including murder.

Although government offi-cials have pledged to guarantee the peace and tranquility of Upala, just how they intend to do so remains to be seen.

The papers

The New York Times said that The New York Times said that the Reagan Administration's measures to deter marijuana smoking were almost as extreme as planting land mines in no-parking zones. Federal enforcers in Georgia had sprayed pot with paraquat, a berbicide which was lethal when inhaled. The paper stated: "If all paraquat did was to eradicate the crop, that might be defensible. Commercial trafficking is, after all, a crime, and a much more serious commercial trafficking is, after all, a crime, and a much more serious one than illegal parking. But common sense and common decency dictate that pot smokers not be put at great health risk in the
